The Scripto Sensa project, envisioned by renowned Cameroonian filmmaker Jean-Pierre BEKOLO and his company, Zili Jungle Studios, is a programme aiming at bringing great African literary masterpieces to the big screen. The project seeks to elevate African cinema to the highest level by emphasizing the narrative depth of film scripts.

In this regard, the company has preselected works by African authors, worked on acquiring rights from their publishers, and will offer a catalogue to 20 filmmakers through a call for applications.

Moreover, special attention is given to the narrative technique: the filmmakers have been supported through workshops for several weeks and later through writing residencies to assist them in the selection and adaptation of the literary works for the screen. The written screenplays will be presented to producers and television networks at film festivals.

Finally, the project includes the creation of a website dedicated to the various phases of the project.
