The project supported by VOU Fiji’s world-renowned dance company, aims to create 80 to 100 sustainable jobs for women and young people in Fiji’s cultural and creative industries by the end of 2024. This involves recruiting women and young people from economically marginalised communities who will receive free dance training and guaranteed employment.

Between 40 and 60 women and young people will have access to high-quality dance training through the VOU Dance Conservatory, whose programme is accredited by the Fiji Higher Education Commission.

The project intends to secure jobs by organising redeveloped VOU performances, offered to locals and tourists, as well as establishing partnerships with external collaborators. In addition, VOU intends to go beyond this project by developing new shows and cultural venues in the islands, as well as on digital platforms, to ensure the sustainability of employment in the years to come.
