The 'Review of the existing legal and policy frameworks for cultural and creative sector and develop people centered cultural policy to promote equitable development of different cultures and heritage' project, aims to create a more inclusive and people-centered policy framework supporting both cultural and creative industries while addressing the needs of diverse groups, including marginalized communities.

In this context, legal and policy frameworks for cultural and creative industries in the member states have been enhanced, including consideration of gender and marginalized groups' concerns.

Furthermore, cultural policies that consider gender equality and promote the inclusion of marginalized groups and equal opportunities have been developed and implemented.

Policy makers and stakeholders have been sensitized to the importance of these responsive cultural policies.

Standardized regional guidelines have been developed to guide member states and ensure policy development consistency.

Finally, negotiations and the removal of restrictions in the sports, arts, and creative sectors have been facilitated to eliminate barriers hindering sector growth and development.
