'Ouaga Film Lab', an incubator for the development and co-production of cinematic projects, aims to facilitate encounters between experts and young talents from the African continent and connect them with professional platforms from around the world.

With this goal in mind, a call for project submissions was published and made available online. The 12 best film and series projects, along with their creators (director/producer pairs), were selected.

Additionally, trainers and mentors were recruited to lead workshops offering accelerated training in production techniques, fiction screenplay writing, series writing, documentaries, and pitching.

Continuing on, mentoring sessions, masterclasses, and a pitch session for the selected projects were organized.

Finally, a ceremony for the announcement and awarding of prizes took place last September, along with networking and follow-ups on the residences and training grants awarded.
